THE ROYAL BOROUGH OF KENSINGTON
AND CHELSEA

Sometimes it helps to have someone else who can speak on your behalf and represent your interests, especially in formal situations or when you don't feel very confident. A person who speaks on your behalf in this way is often called an 'advocate'.

The Care Act puts into law for the first time a duty on your Council to ensure that in certain circumstances you have the support of an advocate when talking to us.

What is an advocate?

An advocate is someone who can speak on your behalf, if you are not able to do so yourself. They can help you get your views or wishes across about issues which are important to you, such as the care or medical treatment which you receive or the management of your finances.

Who can act as your advocate?

A family member or friend can act for you if you are content for them to take on this role as your advocate. In this role they are known as an 'appropriate individual'.

If there is no appropriate individual to support you then your council must arrange an independent advocate for you.

When you are entitled to have an independent advocate appointed for you.

If you do not have anyone able or appropriate to support you, the Council must appoint an independent advocate to ensure that there is someone to support you to express your views and wishes if you would otherwise have 'substantial difficulty' in doing so yourself.

'Substantial difficulty' could mean that you have difficulty in:

- understanding the information you have been given - this could be about your assessment or the support planning visit, or your review
- remembering information - this could be about you needing the information to think about your options and to make a decision later
- using the information so that you can be as involved as possible in making any decisions and
- expressing your views, wishes or feelings.

If you have substantial difficulty in speaking for yourself, the advocate can support you during:

- the care assessment, support planning and review process when your support arrangements are being discussed with you
- a carer's assessment
- a young carer's assessment
- a safeguarding enquiry or a safeguarding adult review

- an appeal against a local authority decision under Part 1 of the Care Act (subject to further consultation)
- a child's needs assessment (when you are the person looking after the child)
- a child's carer's assessment (when you are the person looking after the child, and the child has a disability).

Who cannot act as your advocate

The following people should not be considered by your council as an 'appropriate individual':

- someone who you do not want to support you
- someone who is providing care or treatment to you on a professional or paid basis
- someone who is unlikely to be able to, or available to, properly support you to express your views
- someone who has previously been found to have abused or neglected you, or has previously failed to stop other people abusing or neglecting you.

If you choose to, you can appoint an independent advocate yourself
